BASEBALL

While baseball was never a "business" as such it was the favorite sport of Heber during the 1920's and often wielded, though indirectly, a tremendous power over commerce and industry. So important did it become that whenever a baseball game was scheduled an automatic "half holiday" among all the businesses in town was declared.

For many years there had been baseball teams in Heber, including the Blue Team, the Red Team and the Fats and Leans team, along with teams from the various wards. However, in the exciting Twenties, a nest of baseball birds known as the Heber Eagles were hatched and they made quite a name for themselves.

The team played in the Central Utah State Baseball League, which included teams from Provo, American Fork, Lehi, Spanish Fork, Springville, Eureka, Payson and Midvale in south Salt Lake County. The league played what was then and now known as Class C ball. It was a challenge to meet the competition of this higher grade baseball, and it took a lot of work and practice.
